Topics of the Home and Household.

Olives, stoned and chopped, and mixed with fresh butter or heavy cream and cream cheese make one of the most delicious of sandwich fillings.

The knife used in peeling pineapples should not be used in slicing it, as the peel contains an acid that will cause a sore, swollen mouth. Salt is an antidote for this acid.

Grind up left over meat, roll together with beaten eggs, form into cakes, cover with biscuit dough, steam 20 minutes and serve with tomato sauce. Makes a palatable and economical dinner dish.

No matter how much dripping is used, fish, when being fried, is apt to stick to the pan's bottom. If a tablespoonful of dry salt is put into the pan and rubbed over it, it will be found satisfactory.—Salem (Ore.) Journal.

A most beautiful and fragrant growth for a window may be obtained by soaking in unaltered water for 30 minutes; then add a teaspoonful of salt and cook until tender, but not mushy, perhaps 10 or 15 minutes. Drain carefully, so as not to break the stalks. Arrange on a platter and set in the ice box to cool. Just before serving garnish the stalks just above the tips with a chopped relish, India or chutney. Cover the whole with French dressing and serve immediately.

Cold Feet.
Coldness of feet and limbs is almost invariably an evidence of indigestion. The coldness is due not to the weakness of the heart or feebleness of circulation, as is generally supposed, but to the contraction of the small arteries, preventing blood from entering the parts, says Health. There is generally an irritation of the abdominal sympathetic nerve centers which control the circulation of the lower extremities. This difficulty is not to be removed by exercise or by any special application to the limbs, but by removal of the causes of irritation. This may be a prolapsed stomach or chronic indigestion. Hot and cold foot baths are valuable. These act not simply on the feet and limbs, but by reflex action effect beneficially the abdominal sympathetic centers, which are in a diseased condition.

Salad Recipes.
Asparagus—Boil a bunch of asparagus in unsalted water for 30 minutes; then add a teaspoonful of salt and cook until tender, but not mushy, perhaps 10 or 15 minutes. Drain carefully, so as not to break the stalks. Arrange on a platter and set in the ice box to cool. Just before serving garnish the stalks just above the tips with a chopped relish, India or chutney. Cover the whole with French dressing and serve immediately.

Bananas. Make a bed of crisp lettuce leaves and cover lightly with mayonnaise dressing. Allow half a banana for each person. Cut them into thin slices, using a silver knife. Allow a third as many English walnuts or hickory nut meats as you have bananas. Pass these through a grinder, mix lightly with the bananas, and heap on the lettuce leaves dressed with mayonnaise.

Mixed—Cut string beans, beets, cauliflower, potatoes and celery into small dice; add a few asparagus tops, a bit of onion chopped very fine, and cold boiled peas if you have them. Pile on lettuce leaves and serve with French dressing. Peas or cauliflower that have been served with a cream dressing are not eligible for salad, and when the housewife wishes to save a few for the next day's salad, she will do well to set them aside before making the cream dressing.

Cut firm, white, raw apples into dice and the same quantity of celery. Mix with mayonnaise dressing and serve at once on a curly lettuce leaf or in apple cups. To make the latter, with a sharp knife remove all the center of bright green or red apples and throw them into

A young girl whose supposed wardness caused her to leave her home some weeks ago was detained at the police station yesterday and later sent to Winoski, where her parents are said to reside. Officers took the girl in custody one day earlier when a woman family on River street accused her of fornication. The girl maintained a stolid countenance and refused to divulge the whereabouts of relatives. She gave her name willingly enough and stated her age to be 16. Finally the police got a clue which pointed toward Winoski and when they got in touch with the police of that village their first suspicion that the girl had run away was confirmed.

Following the order enforcing a new ordinance relating to the manner in which teams and autos shall be parked along the main street, officers from police headquarters were on the jump yesterday regulating unintentional violations of the new restrictions. Owners of teams and auto drivers are slow in realizing that the city fathers meant business when they established certain traffic rules, but the officers are confident that people will soon acquaint themselves with the conditions. Vehicles parked on one side of the street are expected to be headed in a single direction, while teams and autos left along the curbing on the other side of the business thoroughfare must be headed in the opposite direction. A score of violations were noted by the office yesterday afternoon and the violators made to conform to the new order.

This afternoon and evening mark the close of the carnival engagement which the Hall & Latip shows have been filling at the Berlin street park. All the week the white way has been thronged by night and the afternoon matinees have been well patronized. A man who is close to the owners of the shows says that the Barre engagement has been one of the most successful of the season.

Last night was conflict night and the spectacle of eager hundreds showering other hundreds with pouches of paper ammunition added color to the scene.

To-morrow the shows will pack their belongings and leave over the Central Vermont railroad for Burlington, where they are to form a part of the summer carnival next week. The Italian Athletic club, under whose auspices Hall & Latip came to Barre, will realize a tidy sum as their share of the proceeds for the week.

A Genius at Raising Corn and Pigs.

In the "Interesting People" department of the August American Magazine appear a picture and sketch of John Honeycutt, who lives in Illinois, where he is a leader among farmers in the business of raising corn and hogs.

He is called the Pied Piper of Pigdom. Following is an extract from the article:

"A few years ago a dispirited blue-eyed printer named John Honeycutt migrated from Chicago to Amboy, Ill., a little town of 50 miles to the west."

"From the very start the natives realized that this 'city person' had ideas. He did not want a little farm, he wanted a section—640 acres. He did not want a silo; he did want machinery. He did not want a threshing gang; he wanted his own outfit. He did not want too many barns, and he did not want a party telephone. He did want miles of stock yard fence, he did want a private wire to Amboy—so he built the fence, and one morning before the county commissioners were up he helped his own gang of recruits start a private wire to the town five miles away. When he came to plant his corn he persisted in testing his seed. When he came to breed hogs, instead of one brood from one animal in one year he wanted three broods. Often, too, he raised every little pig that came, and when a carload of them were 275 days old and weighed 275 pounds he shipped them over the 90 miles to Chicago."

"Not many months went by before the native sons of Illinois began to look upon John Honeycutt as an educational institution that deserved watching. They passed the word out that the city person was a genius at raising corn and at raising, feeding and selling hogs. And the buyers for the Chicago stock yards passed the word out also. Thus, before long, through farm journals, John Honeycutt came to be known far and wide."

"The populace of the little town is proud of the deeds of her favored farmer."

"The neighbors have learned too, that for John Honeycutt his market is his hogs, and to them go every bit of shredded corn and every spare potato and every blade of grass."

"He preaches that the cardinal sin of a hog is sloth and his capital glory his ability to eat. 'The straight and narrow,' he says, falling into the vernacular, 'is for a hog that way over the hills to the slaughter-house, and by the hogs a man sends is he judged.'"

Training School for Women Labor Organizers.

With the coming of its first two pupils, one from Kansas City and the other from Baltimore, the training school for organizers, recently established in Chicago by the National Women's Trade Union League, has begun work in earnest. These two girls, both by a coincidence connected with the brewing industry, one in the bottling of beer and the other in the making of corks for such bottles, have come to receive a three months' training in the work of organizing of girls and women. Both these young women have had practical experience in the labor movement, as leaders in their respective trades, and now seek training which will make that experience more valuable.

The work of the school has been divided into field and classroom work. The field work, which is done under the direction of the presidents and organizers of the local leagues, consists of participation in whatever work of organization is under way. The pupils assist in the distribution of cards calling meetings, and take part in the meetings themselves. They are given practice and instruction in the taking and adjusting grievances, and in presenting them to employers.

Perhaps the most interesting division of the work is the class in public speaking. This class is under the direction of Professor Nelson of the university of Chicago, and other working girls to the number of thirty were admitted. The school offers instruction in the history of the labor and woman movements, both in the United States and in Europe; drill in written and spoken English, and a course in economics. The students are also put in touch with current protective legislation for women, with the means of keeping in touch with it, and with the methods of obtaining and holding such legislation. Lessons in bookkeeping and accounting are also given, as well as instruction in the keeping of minutes, writing of reports, etc. Evening lectures and round table discussions are held once a week. Correspondence courses in those subjects in which it is deemed possible will be undertaken.—From The Survey.
